

Instructor: Emily Dolson

Want to make pretty, dynamic, and interactive data visualizations? D3.js is a Javascript library that enables you to display data in a flexible way, offline or via the Internet. The option to add interactive elements to your visualization lends itself to making your data easy for others to explore. No prior web programming experience required (we'll teach you the necessary Javascript and html), but this workshop is aimed at people with some programming experience.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY | College of Arts & Letters
Digital Humanities

D3.js for Interactive Data Visualization

A Half-Day Software Carpentry Workshop

Friday, December 4 2015
12:00–3:15 PM
MSU Main Library
3-West Instruction Room

Cost: Free!

Snacks and coffee provided.

Please RSVP at:
go.cal.msu.edu/d3js

Sponsored by Digital Humanities,
Social Science Data Analytics,
and MSU Libraries.

